PREFACE.

THE object of this work is to place in possession of many persons interested in examining titles to real estate in the City of New York, an index relating to many wills affecting real estate in the City of New York (including the Greater New York), which cannot be found of record in the Surrogate's offices of the various counties comprising the Greater New York. It is also intended as a guide to several wills originally recorded in the Surrogate's office in New York County, which, on recopying the records, were found to be so dilapidated that full copies could not be made, and were recopied only as the dilapidated condition would permit, these wills (or many of them) were proved in other courts referred to in this work, and can there be found in full. I know this to be a fact from personal experience.

I have been frequently asked as to the Court of Probate (referred to in this work), and would answer: It was a State Court, created by law, and was in existence from 1797 to 1823, when it was abolished. All of its records are on file in the office of the Clerk of the Court of Appeals, at Albany.

JOHN J. POST.

Case Report		Discussion
A 45-year-old male patient with a history of hypertension and diabetes mellitus presented with a 2-week history of progressive weakness and numbness in both lower extremities. The patient also reported a recent weight loss of approximately 10 pounds and a decrease in appetite. Physical examination revealed mild atrophy of the lower extremities and a positive Babinski sign. Laboratory studies showed a hemoglobin of 12 g/dL, a hematocrit of 36%, and a serum ferritin level of 100 ng/mL. A magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) scan of the spine showed a T12 vertebral body fracture. The patient was treated with a 6-week course of intravenous methylprednisolone and a 12-week course of physical therapy. The patient's symptoms improved significantly, and he was discharged on a regimen of oral prednisone and physical therapy.		This case report describes a patient with a T12 vertebral body fracture, which is a common site for osteoporotic fractures. The patient's symptoms of weakness and numbness in both lower extremities, along with a positive Babinski sign, are consistent with a spinal cord injury. The patient's history of hypertension and diabetes mellitus, as well as his recent weight loss and decrease in appetite, suggest a possible underlying systemic disease. The patient's laboratory studies, including a hemoglobin of 12 g/dL, a hematocrit of 36%, and a serum ferritin level of 100 ng/mL, are within normal limits. The MRI scan of the spine showed a T12 vertebral body fracture, which is a common site for osteoporotic fractures. The patient was treated with a 6-week course of intravenous methylprednisolone and a 12-week course of physical therapy. The patient's symptoms improved significantly, and he was discharged on a regimen of oral prednisone and physical therapy.
